The House Report refers to two types of matters: a matter that is "preliminary to trial" (i.e., a pretrial matter) and a "motion which is dispositive of the action." (151) The phrase "dispositive of the action" is consistent with the language "dispositive of a claim or defense of a party" in Rule 72 and with the eight items listed in [sections] 636, which (at least in some sense) dispose of the action. (152) This language from the House Report is not, however, consistent with sanctions orders ...
