were made but also that they were not personally responsible. In a broader sense this book deals with the way how people reduce personal dissonance, how we lie to ourselves, in order to increase our comfort level in life. Self justification seems to be the reason why it is so hard to accept mistakes.

“Mistakes Were Made (but not by me)“

Our self-deception is often the result of an ego-enhancing bias. People come to believe their actions were really the best course they could have taken. Memories, in every situation, are imperfect and can be massaged to support our story. It’s not a lie when you truly believe you did your Mistakes were made, by them. Never mind that I raised hell about those lessons or stubbornly refused to take advantage of them. By far, the most important distortions and confabulations of memory are those that serve to justify and explain our own lives. Memories create our stories, but our stories also create our memories.

Mistakes Were Made (but Not by Me) - Summary & Notes

The phrase "mistakes were made" is such a glaring effort to absolve oneself of culpability that it has become a national joke—what the political journalist Bill Schneider called the "past exonerative" tense." ? Carol Tavriss, Mistakes Were ourselves, in order to increase our comfort level in life. Self justification seems to be the reason why it is so hard to accept mistakes.

Mistakes Were Made (But Not by Me):

Carol Tavris, Elliot ...

"Mistakes were made" is an expression that is commonly used as a rhetorical device, whereby a speaker acknowledges that a situation was handled poorly or inappropriately but seeks to evade any direct admission or accusation of responsibility by not specifying the person who made the mistakes. The acknowledgement of "mistakes" is framed in an abstract sense, with no direct reference to who made the mistakes. A less evasive construction might be along the lines of "I made mistakes" or "John Doe ma
